Panel Summary

Exploring the Impact: Tech-Driven Global Transformation of TA

The discussions of Panel 1 set the tone for a captivating exploration into the evolution of technology within the realm of Talent Acquisition. Delving into the transformative journey from MS Access, Visual Basics, and Resume Parsers to the present landscape dominated by Applicant Tracking Systems, Nishant highlighted the evolution of technology that has significantly shaped the TA experience for both candidates and professionals.

The discussion highlighted how technology has played a pivotal role in simplifying the TA process, citing the paradigm shift from manual processes to automated systems. Despite these advancements, Ameya acknowledged that the field has yet to witness its "UPI moment," signaling a groundbreaking leap forward.

Addressing the dual facets of investment decisions and mindset, Suman emphasized the need for organizations to embrace a transformative mindset alongside strategic investments. It was highlighted that true evolution in TA comes from defining and solving core problems, and envisioning solutions beyond the existing landscape.

The conversation then prompted a critical evaluation of skills, urging professionals to move beyond conventional focuses on sourcing. Sridhar advocated for a shift towards honing skills that technology cannot easily replace. Human skills, deemed indispensable for recruiters, took center stage as the discussion encouraged the development of qualities that remain impervious to automation.

A significant part of the discussion revolved around the need to balance technology and human intervention to ensure fairness. Subhasis stressed the importance of creating diverse variations, continuously trying and testing until optimal solutions are reached, and fostering an environment where machines are equitable and just.

“Technology is taking over a lot of our jobs. Our human skills are going to be the most important thing further moving away from just sourcing which can be done by any other tool.”

Sridhar Krishnan

The panelists concluded by sharing insights into what an ideal tech integration in TA might look like. The discussion provided a glimpse into the future of TA, offering diverse perspectives across various industries.

The rich exchange of ideas illuminated the multifaceted nature of TA's trajectory, showcasing the dynamic landscape shaped by technological innovation.

Panel 1 delivered a thought-provoking exploration into the evolution of technology in Talent Acquisition, unraveling challenges, opportunities, and the imperative for a harmonious blend of humans and technology.

The discussion ended with Ameya leaving us with a powerful quote, “If AI is this all-conquering God, you need to be AI loving, not AI fearing.”

MODERATOR

Panel Summary

Addressing the Challenge: Talent Engagement & Attraction in the Modern Era

Panel 2 was a comprehensive exploration of the multifaceted world of Talent Branding. Moderated by Mithun, the session unfolded with a rich tapestry of perspectives and practical insights.

Sarang, a seasoned expert in talent branding, kicked off the discussion by highlighting the essence of what truly makes a company magnetic to potential talent. He underscored that Talent Branding goes beyond showcasing perks and paychecks; it involves seamlessly integrating the core values and culture of an organization into a narrative that resonates with the aspirations of professionals. His insights shed light on the symbiotic relationship between a strong talent brand and organizational success, urging the audience to view the brand experience from a candidate's perspective.

Madhu delved into the heart of a company's engagement strategy, positioning Talent Branding as its focal point. In today's transparent job market, platforms like Glassdoor amplify the employee voice, making it imperative for companies to authentically live up to the image they project.

Madhu pointed out that a company's reputation is as valuable as its services, emphasizing that the candidate experience begins long before an interview is scheduled.

Vinay brought a fresh perspective to the discussion by emphasizing the importance of storytelling in recruitment. In the digital era, he shared, recruitment is not just about skill matching but also about crafting compelling narratives. Vinay took a deep dive into the art of storytelling, illustrating how companies can transform mundane job descriptions into riveting career adventures. He posed a thought-provoking question to the audience: how many organizations have trained their recruiters on the art of storytelling?

“Before you do any HR Tech or Recruitment Tech implementation blindly, please try and understand what your candidates want. That’s winning half the battle.”

Sarang Brahme

Suranjana shared a masterclass in empathy, advocating for a shift beyond the transactional aspects of hiring to forge genuine relationships. In a world where technology plays a significant role in every interaction, Suranjana made a compelling case for the human touch, asserting that understanding and empathy are not merely nice-to-haves but essential for attracting and retaining top talent.

Collectively, the panelists painted a vivid picture of Talent Branding's pivotal role in shaping an organization's image as an employer. The genuine connection fostered through Talent Branding, they argued, not only commits employees to the company's vision but also ultimately drives business success through a motivated and engaged workforce.

The panel concluded with a resounding agreement on the indispensable nature of Talent Branding in the contemporary recruitment landscape.

MODERATOR

Panel Summary

Addressing the Challenge: Talent Engagement & Attraction in the Modern Era

Panel 3 of the event, moderated by Ameya Ayachit, delved into the transformative potential of emerging technologies in shaping the future of Talent Acquisition (TA). The discussion centered around how cutting-edge tools can redefine efficiency and effectiveness in TA practices.

The panelists shared their unique journeys into the realm of TA technology, highlighting diverse experiences that led them to the forefront of innovation. From leveraging online portals to revolutionizing candidate search methodologies, each speaker emphasized the importance of adaptability and creativity in addressing recruitment challenges.

As the conversation progressed, the evolution of technology in TA became evident. Aadil underscored the shift towards outbound recruiting, stressing the critical role of AI-driven solutions in enhancing efficiency and streamlining talent acquisition processes. Keerthi emphasized the need for TA professionals to embrace technology as a strategic enabler, moving beyond traditional support functions to become strategic partners within organizations.

The panel also addressed prevalent resistance within the HR and TA community toward adopting new technologies. Jayachandran attributed this resistance to budget constraints and apprehensions about AI replacing human roles. However, the panelists agreed that effective change management and user-centric approaches could mitigate these challenges and drive successful technology adoption.

Jubin highlighted the challenges faced by TA professionals in embracing technological advancements, emphasizing the need for organizations to prioritize upskilling and adaptability. Jubin also underscored the ethical considerations surrounding AI adoption in recruitment, advocating for responsible usage and compliance with ethical standards.

“Companies should have AI on their own terms, not AI on AI’s terms.”

Aadil Bandukwala

Insights into the future of TA technology were shared, with discussions revolving around the prospect of a revolutionary moment akin to the UPI in recruitment. Panelists envisioned a future where AI-powered solutions would revolutionize job descriptions and candidate experiences, fundamentally altering the TA landscape.

The conversation concluded with reflections on the impact of the pandemic on technology adoption in TA. While the pandemic accelerated digital transformation, panelists emphasized the importance of responsible AI usage, ethical considerations, and compliance with regulatory standards.

“Any technology is only as good as the user and it is only going to be used when everybody who’s using it understands what problems it’s going to solve.”

Keerthi Kariappa

Overall, the panel discussion provided valuable insights into the evolving role of technology in TA, emphasizing the need for continuous innovation and strategic alignment to navigate the challenges and opportunities of the digital age.
